About the Doyle Drive Replacement Project

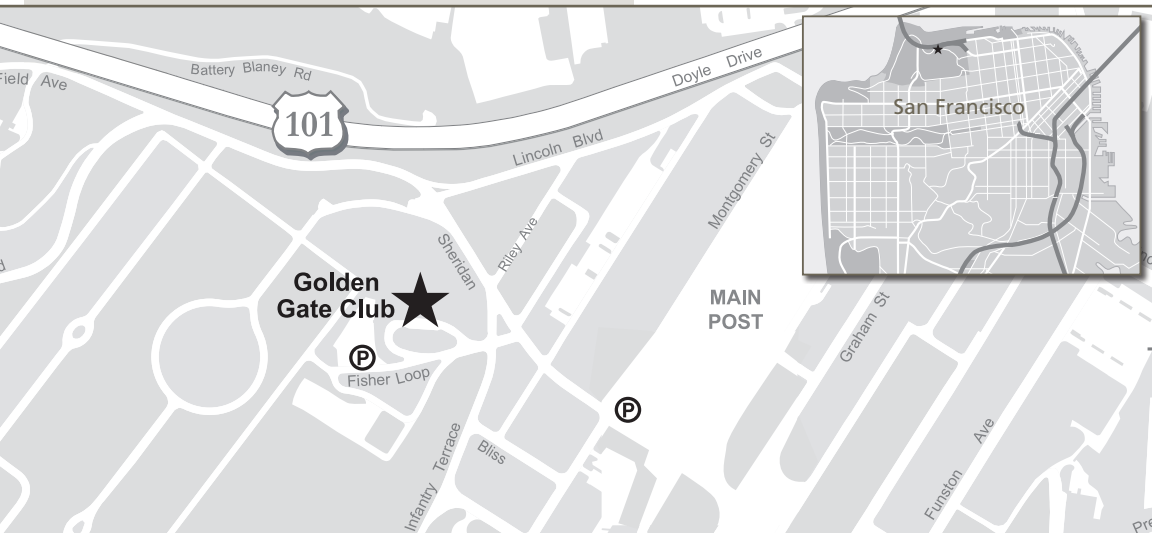

The south access road to the Golden Gate Bridge, known as Doyle Drive or Route 101 in San Francisco, CA, is aging and must be replaced with a facility that meets modern seismic and design standards.

The Doyle Drive replacement is set in a national park and will feature a parkway design including two short tunnels, a wide landscaped median, enhanced pedestrian access and traffic calming transitions.

A partial listing of the identified small business components of Contract #3 include the following areas:

- Site Preparation & Removal of Existing Structure
- Environmental, Air, Noise, Dust, and Vibration Monitoring and Mitigation
- Workforce Support/Administration
- Supplies (Materials, Equipment, etc.)
- Other Project Support:
 - Temporary Signage
 - Materials Hauling
 - Equipment Maintenance & Installation
 - Traffic Control
 - SWPPP Implementation and Safety Services
- Typical Construction Work Associated with Highway and Bridge Construction Projects:
